

MAGOOSH STUDY SCHEDULE

The Digital SAT Two-Month Study Schedule

For the Digital SAT · 2026 Edition

Two months is a reasonable timeframe for comprehensive SAT preparation, allowing you to thoroughly explore all the modules on the Magoosh dashboard. This period is long enough to reinforce your understanding of the material and practice effectively while being short enough to keep your study routine focused and impactful. Now, if you've landed on this page but, in fact, have more or less time to devote to SAT prep, we do have other schedule options to check out. But, if you're right where you want to be, let's get to it!

Time Commitment

Yes, this is a demanding schedule, especially if you intend to watch all the lessons and do all the associated practice and quizzes. To successfully complete it in two months, you can expect to dedicate 5 days each week with a 6th day on practice test weeks. Each session will require around 90 minutes to two hours of study, but the daily commitment can vary significantly based on your individual strengths and goals for score improvement. Tailoring your study sessions to meet your needs is crucial. For example, if you're pretty busy during the week, and have limited time to devote to SAT study, you can change things up: Do less work during the week and have 1-2 longer study sessions on the weekends.

Make it Your Own

This schedule is designed with flexibility in mind. As mentioned, it's intended to cover a whole lot of content in a relatively short timeframe. However, how much time you devote to each study session and how much of the content you cover really comes down to whether or not it will benefit your individual study needs. You are welcome to skip around the modules or skim through lessons that cover material you already know or that don't suit your goal needs. For example:

- If you're stronger in math, you might choose to spend extra time honing your verbal skills through additional practice and review.
- Conversely, if your reading and writing skills are stronger, consider supplementing your practice with more math-focused work.
- If a module is full of lessons on topics you're comfortable with, skip that module's lessons but still do the quizzes and any associated practice. That way you can catch any unexpected weaknesses.
- If you aren't aiming for an incredibly high score, you don't need to spend a lot (or any) time on lessons or practice for the most difficult, less frequently tested concepts, i.e., Trigonometry and the toughest Advanced Math lessons.
- If you already have an above average score and are aiming to push into the highest percentiles, you don't need to spend a lot (or any) time on intro or fundamental concepts--you've likely already mastered these. Prioritize the more difficult questions and spend considerable time reviewing and analyzing the questions you're missing.

How to use This Schedule

Consider it like a living document. As you move through the schedule, feel free to adjust your focus based on your performance in practice tests and quizzes. It's essential to monitor your progress and adapt your study plan to maximize your growth.

Review is Essential

You'll notice that we've estimated quite a bit of time for each quiz and practice set, and that's because we really want you to devote considerable time to review.

After you work through a set of questions, be sure that, for any question you missed, or got right but feel shaky on or took too long to solve, you make note of the content and question type and carefully read the answer explanation. Ideally, you'll keep a digital document or journal where you can jot down the question type and why you missed it. This is a crucial step in determining whether any patterns emerge in the content or question types that are challenges for you.

DAY 56

Take a bow 🙇

You did it!!! Congratulations. Now, let's talk about what you should do if you have some time remaining before you take your official SAT test.

Week 9 and Beyond

At this point, if you have been following the schedule, you have done A LOT of work, an incredible number of questions! Excellent job! For the remaining days until the test, keep practicing.

Your first priority should be to finish any remaining unanswered questions in Magoosh. Your second priority should be to re-answer any questions you got "incorrect." If, when answering previous incorrect questions, you get the vast majority of them correct on the second try, then the supply of "incorrect" questions will dwindle. Many students have found that seeing questions more than once really deepens their understanding. And, of course, if you've exhausted all the questions in Magoosh, remember that Khan is another option for practice.

Best of luck!
